Caring for Your Child
Skin-to-Skin Care (Kangaroo Care)

What is Skin-to-Skin Care?
Skin-to-Skin Care is a special way of holding your baby. It is also called Kangaroo Care. It gets its name from the way a mother kangaroo carries her baby in her pouch. The hospital is a high-tech world with many things that separate you from your baby. Skin-to-Skin Care is a way for you to spend special time bonding with your baby. It is one of the best ways you can help your baby become more stable and grow. Skin-to-Skin Care can be done with both preterm and full term infants.

What are the benefits of Skin-to-Skin?
Research has shown that Skin-to-Skin Care has many benefits for babies and parents:
- Preterm babies gain weight faster
- Babies cry less and sleep better
- Babies’ heart rates, breathing patterns, and temperature become more stable
- Preterm babies come out of incubators and into cribs sooner
- Babies feed earlier and more successfully
- Skin-to-Skin Care promotes breastfeeding
- Milk production is increased in breastfeeding moms
- Skin-to-Skin Care helps infant/parent bonding
- Parents become more confident in caring for their baby
- Parents feel more important in their baby’s care

How is Skin-to-Skin Care Done?
Both mothers and fathers can participate in Skin-to-Skin Care. Skin-to-Skin Care is easiest done when you wear a shirt that opens in the front. Mothers are encouraged to remove their bras. Babies wear only a diaper, and may wear a hat. The parents’ shirt is opened and the baby is placed skin-to-skin against the parent’s chest. The shirt and a blanket are then placed on top of the baby. Parents should not wear strong perfume or smoke before participating in Skin-to-Skin Care.

How will my baby react to Skin-to-Skin Care?
Your baby may take a few minutes to settle in and become stable. Your baby’s nurse will monitor your baby’s vital signs during the transition, and during Skin-to-Skin Care. Once settled, most babies become very comfortable and fall asleep. Although you may become very comfortable as well, it is important that you stay awake. Skin-to-Skin Care should be done for at least an hour or two.
When can my baby participate in Skin-to-Skin Care?
Most hospital babies can participate in Skin-to-Skin Care, although there are some exceptions. Your baby’s nurses can help you decide when Skin-to-Skin Care is right for your baby. If you are interested in enjoying this special “cuddle time” with your baby, please talk with your baby’s nurses.
